AMERICAN SUGAR HIT BY THE TARIFF IN 1913

Profits Slump From $4,432,262 in 1912 to $826,139 Last Year.

DEFICIT OF $3,196,195

Dividends and Other Payments Cut Surplus From $21,425,-620 to $18,229,425.

To just what extent the prolonged tariff discussion at Washington and the consequent wide fluctuations in the sugar markets, together with the strong competition among the various refiners, affected the American Sugar Refining Company is shown in that concern's annual report for the year ended December 31, 1913. In the year 1912 that company's profit from operations was $4,432,262, while for the year just past It was only $826,139.

The annual report shows total credits for the year of $4,184,988, compared with $7,488,130, but the greater part of the credits for 1913 were the result of the Interest and dividends due on investments which totalled $2,274,931. As a result of this falling off in earnings from operations the report shows a deficit of $3.196.195.

In order to meet dividend payments, depreciation on plant and equipment and sundry items this amount was deducted from the surplus of former years, leaving the total profit and loss surplus en December 81, 1913, at $18,229,425, against $21,425,620 on December 81, 1912.

The total net profits of the company and its subsidiaries for the year were $4,184,988, as compared with $7,488,130 in 1912, and from this there were total ductions of $8,284,464. This would have left a deficit for the year of $4,099,-475 but for the fact that the company dms a credit of $903,475, the amount appropriations for improvements of plants expended on new construction dur-ing the year and offset in depreciation on plant and equipment. This left the company with a deficit for the year of The company's assets also

Commenting on the report to the stockholders, J. E. Freeman, secretary, says: "Owing to the prolonged tariff discusof uncertainty and wide fluctuations in the sugar markets. The uncertainty regard-ing rates, as well as dates when change of duties would take effect, restricted business in refined and brought prices to unusually law levels, such shrinkages in values affecting refiners' stocks of both raw and refined sugar.

"The competition between refiners and between the refiners and beet sugar pro-ducers has been exceptionally severe, and refiners-margin between raw and refined averaged lower than for any year, with one exception, during the last fourteen one exception, during the has four-ten years. The year opened with a price for granulated sugar of 4.80 cents per pound and closed with a price of 3.92 cents per pound, a drop of about seven-eighths of a cent a pound. While raws declined from cent a pound. While raws declined from 3.73 to 3.23, there was a far greater decline in the price of rained than in the price of raws, which were selling at the and of the year at below their average cost in all producing countries. This de-cline, largely owing to the uncertainties of the tariff and the acute competition tween refiners, resulted in an unprofitable to the refining and other sugar in-

In addition to the tariff conditions affecting the sugar market in the United States, the Cuban crop of 1912-1913 in-States, the Cuban crop of 1912-1913 increased over the crop of the preceding year by 533,000 tons, the increase for the world's production for the same year being 2,256,000 tons. For the year 1913-1914 the estimated world's production is nearly 19,000,000 tons, an increase over last year of about 800,000 tons. This has also had its influence in bringing about a decline in prices not only in the United States but throughout the world.

"The average market difference in quotations between raw and refined guars for the year 1913 is 71.2 cents per hundred pounds for the year 1912, resulting in a decreased profit to this company as compared with the preceding year of about 10 cents per hundred pounds of sugar, or approximately $3,000,000 on the company's total output."
